Sea Shepherd Cove Guardians Page (official) added 11 new photos to the album: February 4th, 2015 - Striped Dolphins - Slaughtered — at Taiji Japan

A devastating start to the month for the dolphins swimming passed trying to migrate to warmer waters. 3 Red Cove's in 3 days, the dolphins have been hit hard by the relentless greed of the Taiji Killers.
Cove Guardian's spotted the drive formation beginning at approximately 8:00am local Japan time. It was not long after that the family became visible ahead of the drive. The striped dolphins fought incredibly hard, the speed in which they swam in a desperate attempt to get away from the killing boats was astounding. . At one point the pod became split into two separate drives as the killers struggled to keep them under their control. After 2 hours of continuous fighting against the boats it was clear that the pod had expended all the energy they could possibly muster. Exhausted and terrified they were pushed into the cove where they were sealed in by the hunters nets.
35-40 adults and juveniles were tethered by their flukes and were literally dragged onto the shore where they were murdered side by side. The water was churned with the thrashing of the dolphins and the blood spilled from their bodies. No survivors were left from today's bloody slaughter, mother's, father's, brother's and sister's now just slabs of meat at the packing plant to be sold and eaten. Those witnessing the livestream today will have been exposed to the true nature of the monsters at work here in Taiji. Footage is now archived at http://livestream.seashepherd.org/ #OpInfinitePatience #tweet4taiji

Janet Austin-Grimsley You saw what ISIS did to your 2 citizens. This is no different than what you allow to happen to the dolphins of Taiji. They all had families that loved them, the all had freedom, loved life, were tortured, murdered in cold blood. Your lack of empathy for either shows you have no honor, PM Abe. I feel sorry for the families of the two human victims. I feel even more sorry for the dolphins slaughtered almost every day in Taiji. The two humans went overseas willingly. The dolphins were just passing by and were herded viciously into The Cove, manhandled, run over by skiffs, cut, shoved, laughed at, viciously had metal spikes shoved into their backs until they bled internally and into the cove, fighting for every last breath, watching their loved ones being brutally murdered before them, babies, juveniles, mothers, fathers...it doesn't matter to your executioners. You talk of honor PM Abe. You show no honor to these dolphins. Therefore you get no honor. Your executioners laugh as they kill them like they enjoy it, smoke cigarettes while lying on the bodies, these beautiful sentient cetaceans you claim as food, some to to be sold into slavery to perform circus tricks for money...that is your biggest meal ticket, but the rest are murdered in cold blood. SHAME ON YOU, PRIME MINISTER! Shame on you for allowing, getting kickbacks to your government, and the dolphins pay the price for your greed. NO HONOR, JAPAN...NO HONOR!!! Only blood on your hands and your soul is tainted with blood of those you allow to be killed.

You should be happy because it saved thousands of fishes that could have been just a breakfast for those Dolphins..or are you just a japanhater#?

5 · 14 hrs

Sea Mammals @Nima Gurung ,Humans have the dolphins stolen the fish, because Peoples eat fish every day. The fishing industry has stolen 72% of fish stock in the sea. 150,000 years living dolphins longer on this planet than humans, it was always a lot of fish. Within 50 years, the humans have ruined the oceans. that is fact!!! killing of dolphins is a crime against the species, against the nature and against humanity !!

I don't think the Dolphins are anywhere near endangered species!!.
The problem seems to be in the rising human population..
More people need more meat and I don't think Japan's population is sky rocketing..
You should consider every causes and not just blindly start bashing Japan..
Thank u

5 · 12 hrs

Sea Mammals @Nima Gurung; However, the Dolphins are near extinction. The Millitary sonar, sonar of the oil industry, fishing nets, loud sounds, humans, strandings, diseases, all this killing hundreds thousands of dolphins and whales in a year. Whales and dolphins are sexually mature from 6-10 years. -and- dolphin babies suckle up to four years at the mother, jung whales and dolphins swim up to 6 years with their mothers.

Do the math; 100,000 dolphins and whales are killed in the year, born are 20,000. In about 8-10 years, many species have become extinct.

Cetaceans are more intelligent than humans, living 150,000 years longer on earth. Cetaceans have the same family structure as humans. Whoever kills a dolphin which kills a human. The only difference to people is that they do not have hands, feet and the same voice as we have. If you want, I'll give you scientific evidence.

Archeological evidence in the form of whale remains discovered in burial mounds suggests that whales have been consumed in Japan since the Jōmon period (12,000 BC). Without the means to engage in active whaling, consumption at that time primarily stemmed from stranded whales.[12] Surviving Ainu folklore reveals a long history of whaling[12] and a spiritual association with whales.[13] The earliest records of hand thrown harpoons date back to the 12th century.[14]

I'll Be Back "2009: Film explores dolphin hunts Amazon bans sale of dolphin meat Group: 250 dolphins could be killed
Defending tradition
Although the hunting of dolphins is widely condemned in the West, many in Japan defend the practice as a local custom -- and say it is no different to the slaughter of other animals for meat.
Chief Cabinet Secretary Yoshihide Suga told reporters at a news conference Monday that marine mammals including dolphins were "very important water resources."
"Dolphin fishing is one of traditional fishing forms of our country and is carried out appropriately in accordance with the law. Dolphin is not covered by the International Whaling Commission control and it's controlled under responsibility of each country."
Taiji mayor Kazutaka Sangen echoed the sentiments.
"We have fishermen in our community and they are exercising their fishing rights," he said. "We feel that we need to protect our residents against the criticisms."
He accused the Sea Shepherd of using the issue of dolphin hunting to raise funds and attract attention. The Sea Shepherd Conservation Society has been live-streaming video of events in the cove and posting frequent updates on Twitter.
The Wakayama Prefectural Government, where Taiji is located, gives an annual "catching quota." This year, the government allows for the hunting of 2,026 small porpoises and dolphins (557 are for bottlenose dolphins)."

Beejay Cody Can you read?...."Records showed that while whaling does date back 400 years, the "traditional" whaling actually ended in 1878 after a whaling disaster that decimated the Taiji whaling fleet. Regular dolphin drive hunts date back only 42 years to 1969 when pilot whales were captured on a large scale for display at the Taiji Whale Museum. Currently only 8.5% of the people in the town are employed in the fisheries and only about 100 people at the most depend on whaling or whaling-related activities for their livelihood. Historical records and demographic data do not support the contention that "Taiji is a 'Whaling Town' that cannot survive without whaling."

Japanese open-boat whaling

Because of some evidence of whaling found such as hand harpoons and porpoise skulls in burial mounds, hunting of cetaceans possibly began in the Jōmon period (10,000-300 BC) according to The Institute of Cetacean Research.[citation needed]
The oldest written mention of whaling in Japanese records is from Kojiki, the oldest Japanese historical book written in the 7th century AD. In this book whale meat was eaten by Emperor Jimmu. In Man'yōshū, the oldest anthology of poems in the 8th century, the word "Whaling" (いさなとり) was frequently used in depicting the ocean or beaches.
One of the first records of whaling by the use of harpoons are from the 1570s at Morosaki, a bay attached to Ise Bay. This method of whaling, known as the harpoon method (tsukitori-ho) spread to Kii (before 1606), Shikoku (1624), northern Kyushu (1630s), and Nagato (around 1672). Kakuemon Wada, later known as Kakuemon Taiji, was said to have invented net whaling, or the net method (amitori-ho) sometime between 1675 and 1677. This method soon spread to Shikoku (1681) and northern Kyushu (1684)
Using the techniques developed by Taiji, the Japanese mainly hunted four species of whale, the North Pacific right (Semi-Kujira), the humpback (Zato-Kujira), the fin (Nagasu-Kujira), and the gray whale (Ko-Kujira or Koku-Kujira). They also caught the occasional blue (Shiro Nagasu-Kujira), sperm (Makko-Kujira), or sei/Bryde's whale (Iwashi-Kujira).
Whaling has been frequently mentioned in Japanese historical texts.[31]

Whaling history (鯨史稿), Seijun Ohtsuki, 1808.[32]
Whaling Picture Scroll (鯨絵巻), Jinemon Ikushima, 1665.[33]
Whale Hunt Picture Scroll (捕鯨絵巻), Eikin Hangaya, 1666.[34]
Ogawajima Whaling Wars (小川島鯨鯢合戦), Unknown, 1667.[35]
In 1853, the US naval officer Matthew Perry forced open Japan's doors to the world. One of the purposes of this was to gain access to ports for the American whaling fleet in the north-west Pacific Ocean. The traditional whaling was eventually replaced in the late 19th century and early 20th century with modern methods.

In response, the IWC voted and concluded in 18 September 2014 that "Japan should abide by an International Court of Justice ruling", but Japanese officials have vowed to continue whale hunting in the Antarctic in 2015".

Maria Grazia Amenta Pod is being driven in. 3 bangers return to make preparations.
A pod of approx 30 striped dolphins have been driven into the cove and all, including juveniles and babies have been slaughtered.
As we saw from the bodies being thrown onto the skiffs, these are Taiji, Wakayama Prefecture baby killers!!!

Sea Shepherd Cove Guardians Page (official) added 11 new photos to the album: Risso's Dolphin family murdered. Februrary 3rd, 2015 — at Taiji Japan

This album is in memory of the the family of 8 Risso's dolphins that lost their lives today in Taiji. They did not die in silence, the world was watching through the lense of the Cove Guardian's camera. We will stop this senseless killing. We are relentless and we will never give up as long as this continues. Shame on you Taiji, shame on you Japan. These lives were not yours to take! #tweet4Taiji #OpInfinitePatience

Dianna Tregenza Cattle, pigs and chicken are domesticated and bred for consumption.....Dolphins are wild migratory animals. you have no idea what damage you are doing to the wild population or the gene pool by this systematic slaughter. you are wiping out millions of years of evolution. And for what....excess meat you don't eat and ends up in pet food? These animals belong to the world and the world has its eyes on you.

2 · Yesterday at 00:20

Yamamoto San @Dianna Tregenza - Sustainable hunting is better for the environment. Dolphins are as free range as you can get, they live a life of complete freedom until the day they are caught.

No farming lands are required, no water, irrigation, electricity are required to farm the dolphins, nature breeds them.

"you have no idea what damage" - they have more ideas than you. Taiji has been whaling and hunting dolphins for centuries, obviously they are doing it sustainably since dolphins are still around, they are finding pods almost every day. Can you find dolphins every day off the coast of the UK?

"you are wiping out" - slaughtering of 0.2% of the population can hardly be seen as "wiping" out, get your facts straight.

"excess meat you don't eat" - who told you that? you have believed too many lies from anti-dolphin hunt groups, open you eyes and get the stories and facts from the other side.

"These animals belong to the world" - the moment they swim into Japan's territorial waters, they are Japan's marine resources.

"the world has its eyes on you" - no it doesnt, only a small minority of dolphin fanatics, scattered around the world.

Beejay Cody Check your sustainability quote Yamamoto San on ceta base and you will see what you are saying is rubbish, the number of Dolphins driven into the Cove, killed etc has been declining every year so your statement is BS.

4 · Yesterday at 13:33

Yamamoto San "has been declining every year" - arent you happy about that? as you said, demand for dolphin meat has been declining, so it is expected for catch numbers to decrease, basic really.

2 · Yesterday at 15:00

Lynn Lawrence Probably declining because the total count is declining.

1 · 20 hrs

Pauline Giorgi Cause they're serial killers!!!

2 · 20 hrs

Lynn Lawrence You are so right. They never have enough. And they seem to get a thrill doing it. It is not just a job to feed their family. They seem get a thrill from it. you can see the evin in their eyes.

2 · 20 hrs

Yamamoto San How do you know they get a thrill? have you been out on the hunt with them?

2 · 19 hrs

Dianna Tregenza Yamamoto we have seen the live feeds that show them deliberately running over Dolphins were their outboard engines, we have seen them laughing in the water whilst wrestling the Dolphins for slaughter, we have seen them joking whilst they drag the Dolphins by the tail into the killing cove. I can't believe their joviality stops when they ram the metal spikes into the blowhole and watch the Dolphins take up to 25 minutes to die.

Yamamoto San I do not deny the dolphin hunt is taking place, that's how you hunt dolphins. I can find plenty of videos of similar things happening to cows, where they are herded, pushed onto conveyor belts, then either throat slashed or bolted on the head. Similar things except that happen on land instead of water. Why dolphins get the special treatment?

2 · 13 hrs

Yamamoto San @Dianna Tregenza - "Dolphins take up to 25 minutes to die." - They take on average 5 secs... http://www.cypress.ne.jp/jf-taiji/geiruihosatu.pdf

2 · 13 hrs

Dianna Tregenza Because they are wild, not bred for human consumption, livestock do not have the same intelligence levels as cetaceans nor are they run over by quad bikes. Bolts to the head or slashing the throats are immediate deaths. 5 seconds?! Sorry but that really is BS properganda watch the video I posted. Massive scientific revelations about how Dolphins communicate, call each other names, have life long bonds to their families have been discovered in even the last decade and yet Japan refuses to keep up and stay with its "traditions". That's why ALL cetaceans should get special treatment. Yamamoto, I have looked as this issue from all sides, including interviews with Japanese fishermen and their families, I have looked at radical animal activists point of view too of which I am not. I have looked at the slaughterhouses in my own country and they are far from perfect ..... They are also far from the horror that unfolds during these drive hunts in Taiji. The YouTube film I posted gives me all the answers I need and I will use my voice to stand against it. I respect your views, I just don't agree with them nor do thousands of others....I believe that Tim from the Japanese Embassy in London is currently off sick with stress from the amount of complaints against these hunts. I would also like to thank you, unlike some here for not taking your arguments to a personal level....at least you know how to debate a subject fully. I hate the actions of Japan but I do not hate Japan or its people not even the Taiji fishermen - I just hate what they do. I am deeply saddened by the death of Kenji Goto and the Jordanian man.....ISIS a shames all humanity.

Nothing special about dolphins. Valid game and valid food source. Perfectly legal.

1 · Yesterday at 15:02

Marijana Stokes Yamamoto San you sick said stick person why you live in our country iff Japan is so great you put Australia down yet you live here . Did Abe give you more money so you can talk agains all off us , you truly trust that Japan is telling the truth about dolphin meat they lie to all Japanese

15 hrs

Yamamoto San At least I put an effort to learn both sides of the story, I do my personal research to visit Taiji and learn about their side of the story, I talked to the locals, not much I can say about you where you rely solely on one-sided biased information from Sea Shepherd or other anti-dolphin hunt groups.

I dont put Australia down, I simply state the practices in each country to highlight your hypocrisies. I am fascinated and love Kangaroos, I was surprised to learn that Australian hunt and eat Kangaroos. But I'm in no position to tell Australia what to do, you do.

"why you live in our country" - I'm in Australia since certain company cannot find the people in Australia with my unique skill, so I'm hired to do that job.

3 · Yesterday at 05:13

Yamamoto San Why dont you stop all the heartless, souless, no honour slaughterhouse workers and butchers, the people living on blood money in Australia first, then maybe you might have some moral grounds to tell Japan what to do

2 · Yesterday at 06:19

Brenton Lewis Slaughterhouses in Australia have been closed down when cruelty is exposed. Not to mention that fact is disengenious

1 · 22 hrs

Brenton Lewis That should be disingenuous. The fact that Australia is working to stop cruelty including the dugong and turtle horror gives us the moral edge.

22 hrs

Yamamoto San Brenton, regardless of slaughter methods used, the question is that is Australia still slaughtering animals? as long as your respective country continue to slaughter animal, you are in no position to tell others not to, why do you think all other countries leaders have been quiet about this? not a single word from Obama, Cameron, Abbott, etc..
19 hrs

Brenton Lewis there can be no "regardless of slaughter methods", humane killing is the only way. To suggest anything other than that is morally bankrupt and has no place in Australia, Japan or anywhere else. Indeed no word from Obama, but Kennedy spoke, No word from Cameron, but the ambassador spoke, no word from Abbott, but the environment minister spoke. Do you believe they did not speak on behalf on their governments? Not quite the universal approval or acquiescence you suggest.
18 hrs

Yamamoto San There is no such thing as humane killing, you would be naive to think so. Kennedy spoke once, maybe she stepped out of line, hence has been muffled ever since. They may speak, but they know their legal boundaries, they cannot interfere with any countries domestic affairs, as much as I can't dictate American gun laws (I loath guns), or I can't tell the Canadian what to do with the Seal hunts
17 hrs

Marijana Stokes Yamamoto San why don't you go back to. Japan since you hate Australia you live here iff it was better in Japan what are you doing living in Australia
16 hrs

Yamamoto San "what are you doing living in Australia" - certain company cannot find the people in Australia with my unique skill, so I'm hired to do that job. Dont worry I travel globally constantly, so I dont spent all my time in Australia.
1 · 13 hrs

Brenton Lewis Marijana, I may disagree with Yamamoto San and he with me but he has been respectful in that disagreement. I don't think telling him to leave Australia adds anything to the discussion. I happen to think Australia is a great place to live even with our flaws and whatever of our disagreement, I hope he does as well.
12 hrs

Marijana Stokes He picks on Australia all the time we not perfect but he should respect the fact that this country is doing it's best .I know that every country has problems , but every time we say about Taiji scum he tells us how horrid our country is . I was not borne in this country but this country has given great life to many so I will defend this country Brenton Lewis . hiding behind tradition is not right & even by Japanese law what these people are doing is against the law the only reason the government does not stop it as they greedy so capture & slavery pays well , also I do write to my congress about loot off issues which are not right .do if Yamamoto San wants to protect what is wrong on all levels morally .these are crimes against humanity against earth iff this does not stop all over the world our grandchildren will inherit empty sick earth, I really hope that people look to the future money want save the humanity greed will only destroy everything .so excuse that it's ok for fisherman to do what they do as it's worse in our slaughter houses ,
10 hrs

Yamamoto San I pick examples on Australia because I know it well, after living and working in Australia for over 25 years. Unlike you I only attempt to make comments on facts and what I understand well, I do not make assumptions or quote half-baked facts.
8 hrs

Brenton Lewis Marijana, I too defend this country, I am immensely proud of our contribution and equally aware of our shortcomings. I too attempt to make comments on what I understand well and as my whole background and life has been an academic, researcher and clinician in the mental health area I say unequivocally what happens in Tiaji is wanton cruelty and pathological. To say it is legal and therefore right is to miss the point entirely. In saying that I will never agree with Yamamoto san we see this through a different prism. I still believe however we should deal on issues not personal attacks.

1 · Yesterday at 08:24

Stephen Barnett Your US citizens also hunt and eat dolphins, whales and belugas from spring to summer. US navy kills dolphins all over the world. Where is the protest?
Yesterday at 14:05

Patricia Banks We have a VERY few Native people up on the Northwest coast that hunt some whales but it is certainly nowhere near the massive scale that tbe Japanese consume and slaughter them . Most people in the U.S. neither hunt or consume whale or dolphin meat. There are laws here against it.
1 · Yesterday at 14:24

Stephen Barnett Taiji and other whaling towns are also small minority of people out of 127 millions of population but you bash the entire country. Hypocritical double-standard. Do you even know that Norway has been hunting more whales than Japan for the last 4 years? But Japan and Norway don't hunt endangered bowhead and humpback whales unlike the USA. Greenpeace condemned your whaling program, too.
Yesterday at 14:37

Patricia Banks I am against all whaling anywhere and I do my share of protesting, e-mailing and signing petitions in this country too. There is no place anywhere on earth to justify whaling in this day and age. If other countries think that setting trade sanctions against the U.S. would stop them from harming or exploiting cetaceans, I would say go for it. I have written and protested against the government here on many issues affecting cetacean rights.
2 · Yesterday at 14:42

Yamamoto San @Patricia Banks - "We have a VERY few Native people" - yes but they hunt those huge bowhead whales, in terms of tonnage, they killed more than Japan whale/dolphin combined
1 · Yesterday at 15:03

Patricia Banks And I am not condoning it. I think ALL whaling should cease. But I also think you are mistaken about them killing more than the Japanese do.
2 · Yesterday at 15:08

Pauline Giorgi Taiji monsters are serial killers!!
1 · 20 hrs

Yamamoto San @Patricia Banks - Alaska native hunt bowhead whales, each weighing 75 tons. Last season Alaska killed 57 whales, total 4,275 tons to feed 10,000 people, around 427.5kg/person. Taiji killed 849 dolphins last season, each dolphin average 300kg, total 255 tons to feed 3450 people, around 74kg/person... figures are surprising clear isnt? numbers dont lie.
19 hrs

Patricia Banks Except the people there are not eating much of the whale and dolphin meat. It is piling up in a warehouse. That hardly justifies the amount of animals that are being slaughtered in Taiji. Maybe the tonnage is greater in Alaska but not the actual number of animals being killed when you talk about the numbers of slaughters in the dolphin drive. Anyway, the big money maker there is all the ones captured for the slave trade. I think hunting should be banned in Alaska as, well as everywhere else. I have written to the government here as well as signed petitions. So, go ahead and talk numbers.....I am against all of it. NONE of it is justified.
18 hrs · Edited

Patricia Banks And, I would like to add that it is a FACT that 75% of the whale meat in Japan from the hunt 2 years ago is still sitting in a warehouse because no one wants to buy it. So much for feeding the people.
1 · 18 hrs · Edited

Yamamoto San "Except the people there are not eating much" - not sure where you are getting this fact from? have you been to Taiji and know this for sure or are you relying on the propaganda from anti-dolphin groups?

"whale meat in Japan from the hunt 2 years ago is still sitting in a warehouse" - all countries stockpile food for security purposes. Due to its low food self-sufficiency rate, around 40%, Japan relies on stockpiling to secure a stable food supply, at the moment Japan has 1.2 million ton of seafood stockpiled, which include 5000 tons of whale meat.

"no one wants to buy it" - again check your facts again. I was in Tokyo last week, went to one of the many whale specialty restaurant in Shinjuku for dinner, the restaurant was packed with people and it required advance booking. I took pictures of the menu, dinner & the restaurant entrance, I made it public on my FB page so you can see it if you wish.
18 hrs

Patricia Banks That does not make it acceptable.....anywhere.
18 hrs

Yamamoto San @Patricia Banks - "I think hunting should be banned in Alaska" - I suggest you go and live in Alaska for 6 months, especially where native Americans live, not the big cities, see if you can survive on a vegan diet.
18 hrs

Patricia Banks Well, since I DO live on a vegan diet, your point is not valid with me.
18 hrs

Yamamoto San "That does not make it acceptable" - What's so not acceptable about eating?
18 hrs

Patricia Banks Eating the flesh of any animal is not acceptable to me. I don't want another being to have to die so that I can eat. Just my personal philosophy. And there ARE other meat sources that are specifically farmed to feed people.....there is no need for anyone to have to hunt whales and dolphins anymore.
1 · 18 hrs

Yamamoto San @Patricia Banks - "I DO live on a vegan diet" - I'm sure you will not be able to do so in the arctic circle where Alaskan natives live.

"Eating the flesh of any animal is not acceptable to me" - That's your lifestyle choice, dont impose your belief onto others

"Just my personal philosophy" - exactly so, your personal opinion, so dont impose your opinion onto others.

"there ARE other meat sources" - why are you ok to kill other animals?

"specifically farmed" - farming is cruel, animals locked in cages their entire life, also bad for the environment, up to 25% of greenhouse gases are produced from cattle farming, and greenhouse gases will be the biggest killer of ocean lives. Dolphins and whales are as free range as you can get, they enjoy a life of complete freedom until the day they are caught.

"there is no need for anyone to have to hunt whales and dolphins anymore" - that's your opinion, obviously Japan and many whaling nations do not agree with you.
18 hrs · Edited

Patricia Banks I do have the freedom to state my opinion just as you do. ALL opinions come from a personal perspective.
1 · 15 hrs

Yamamoto San @Patricia Banks - "I do not impose it on anyone" - really? one of your post you said you signed petitions, wrote to government to ban whaling in Alaska, in a way if by any slim chance you get it banned, you are forcing the Alaskan native to change their livelihood, lifestyle and eating habit... If that is not imposing your belief, I dont know what is.
13 hrs

Patricia Banks Many cultures have changed their beliefs to keep up with the times. Especially if their practices are archaic and not sensible in the modern age. It is not at all uncommon. Do not ALL activists impose their beliefs on the group that they are protesting against?

EVOLVE! Campaigns with Minnie Lacson Gutierrez and 33 others

Until we establish a felt sense of kinship between our own species and those fellow mortals who share with us the sun and shadow of life on this agonized planet, there is no hope for other species, there is no hope for the environment, and there is no hope for ourselves. ~Jon Wynne-Tyson

Ruth Fisher One by one, day by day, we can make a difference - your voice counts!
In the small coastal town of Taiji, hundreds to thousands of dolphins and small whales are captured and killed each year during the annual dolphin drive hunt.
For a staggering six months of every year - September 1st until March - a group of dolphin hunters herd wild dolphins from the ocean's open waters into a hidden shallow bay, now infamously known around the world as the cove.
The hunters capture entire families, or pods, of various species of dolphins at a time in order to satisfy the international demand for captive dolphins in the entertainment industry. Those taken captive are sent to aquariums and marine parks worldwide.
The remaining dolphins are killed by a hunting technique known as "pithing," which leaves the still conscious dolphins paralyzed and often drowning in the blood of their own family members.
This barbaric and inhumane slaughter must stop! Please sign this petition and let the NZ Japanese Ambassador and the Japanese Government know that we are shocked, saddened and digusted that this practice is allowed to continue!

Ondine Angarola @Lynn don't mind that person. They don't know history. The middle east has been violent for thousands of years. It has nothing to do with the USA. I suppose those that critic the US don't care about those that are slaughtered on a daily basis over there by their OWN people. Look at that poor Jordanian pilot that was burned alive. The person above is ignorant. Doesn't know history and is uneducated. Ignorance is bliss for some. Tribal violence has existed in the middle east for thousands of years. Go ahead and blame the USA for that too... except it didn't exist thousands of years ago. Pathetic.

Statement by Chief Cabinet Secretary Suga at an Ad hoc press conference on the Japanese hostage in Syria (February 1):
"Earlier, a video circulated on the Internet appearing to show that Mr. Kenji Goto has been murdered. I cannot help but fe el even more intense indignation at the fact that this kind of utterly cruel and despicable act of terrorism occurred again.

I again resolutely condemn it. I immediately instructed the Deputy Chief Cabinet Secretary for Cri sis Management and the Secretary General of the National Security Secretariat to engage in a thoroughgoing response, including gathering information in cooperation with the relevant ministries and agencies."

Statement by the Chief Cabinet Secretary at an ad hoc press conference on the kidnapping of Japanese hostages (January 25)
"A photograph has circulated on the Internet of Mr. Kenji Goto holding photographs of a Japanese national who has been killed, appearing to be Mr. Haruna Yukawa. Such an act is an unpardonable, abhorrent outrage that I strongly condemn. I strongly urge that no harm be inflicted upon the other Japanese national, Mr. Kenji Goto, and that he be released immediately. I immediately instructed the Deputy Chief Cabinet Secretary for Crisis Management and the Secretary General of the National Security Secretariat to engage in a thoroughgoing response, including gathering information in cooperation with the relevant ministries and agencies. I also intend to convene a Ministerial Council shortly. "
